

SUMMER AND WINTER SCHOOLS SKJOLDEN, NORWAY 2017/18

A PLACE TO DREAM.

On the site of Ludwig Wittgenstein's wooden House in beautiful Skjolden, students of Architecture, Engineering, Philosophy and others are invited to participate in rebuilding LW's writing house from the original materials.

The Investigations.

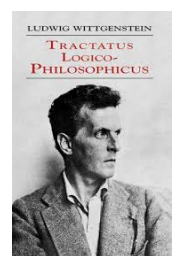

The W house site 2017.

The Location

The W house.

The Tractatus.

'The Practical Wittgenstein'

LW studied at the universities Berlin (Engineering), Manchester (Aeronautics) and Cambridge (Philosophy). The summer school will include visits to the original site where LW built his writing house in 1914 and work on the house where the materials are now applied in a newer house established in 1955 a few hundred meters away and built with the materials from the original house.

Course options

There are three options each of five working days. Students can participate in several, if space allows.

Session 1: Students will be participating in taking the 1955 house apart in Aug-Sept 2017, using internationally approved conservation methods to register, mark and store the wooden components as preparation for Session 2.

Session 2: Rebuilding the house indoor during Nov-Dec 2017, based on materials from Session 1.

Session 3: Taking the indoor rebuilt house apart from Session 2 apart, move it to the original site and construct it in its final location during May, June, July and August 2018.

Session 1 will have a small admin fee only, while there will be a summer school fee for Sessions 2 and 3.

Certificate

Participants will receive a signed certificate of practical participation.
